TEACHING ENGLISH AS A FOREIGN LANGUAGE

GRAMMAR

DRILLS & QUESTIONS
for
PUTTING GRAMMAR into PRACTICE

by Bob Wilson from autoenglish.org
These drills and questions are ideal as follow-ups for the free exercises at www.autoenglish.org
About the author

Bob Wilson was born in Sydney in 1966 and messed up a degree in materials science at Brunel University in England in 1989. After spending 3 amazing months in Ecuador, he did a TEFL course by correspondence and moved to Valencia, Spain in 1992.

After too many years working late in academias, Spanish evening schools, his Spanish friends urged him to finish his education or be forever miserable, broke and childless. The Open University gave him back his self-esteem, payable by monthly installments and brought him instant happiness.

He has now finished a Spanish masters degree in education and hoped to secure a place in a Spanish state-aided secondary school. Unfortunately, the Spanish authorities considered his British degree in language studies as invalid.

For any teflers in despair, a friend of his earns big money by teaching private classes in companies. Way to go.

About this book

INTRO

This book is for teachers of English as a foreign language teaching adults and adolescents. It contains drills and questions to memorise and practise language items from beginner to intermediate level. It serves as a follow-up to the worksheets available free at www.autoenglish.org.

THE DRILLS

Going over structures and tables once just ain’t enough. The drills have been written for internalizing language items, such as irregular verbs, using the auditive memory. I have found these drills essential for adults who do not study between classes and they make for good warm-ups at the beginning of class.

LEARNING ∝ REPETITION

THE QUESTIONS

The questions try to relate grammar and other textbook content to the lives and interests of students. In other words, they try to make the language items meaningful and to generate real conversation in the classroom. Remember to get students to ask the questions as well as answer them. Complain if you get monosyllabic responses and remind people whose responsibility it is to learn. A teacher teaches, a student studies.

LEARNING ∝ MEANINGFUL USE

GAMES AND ROLEPLAYS

If the class is boring, it’s the teacher’s fault. I always save the last 15 minutes of class time for games and role plays. This brings on the interaction; the thinking on the spot; the adrenalin and the fun. You will find a section on games and roleplays at www.autoenglish.org.

LEARNING ∝ FUN
A Note on Teaching English as a Foreign Language

GRAMMARITIS

One day, not so long ago, I was down to give an intensive business English class to an upper-intermediate executive. I found the student in a state of vexation because he couldn’t grasp the three different uses of “I wish”. We picked our way through the rules; we murphied it; we did an exercise on it from my website (autoenglish.org). By the end of it all, I was vexed too. “Ask me,” I said, exhausted, “how often I use an ‘I wish’ phrase.”

And I answered, “About once every six months.”

Then I asked him, “Are you confident about writing reports in English?”

“No really,” he said.

BOREDOM

“Open your books at page 63,” you say from the thorax. You look up and scan the faces for signs of life. “Can anyone tell us what the second conditional is used for?”

You cleverly employ the inclusive first person plural. Cleverly, you relate the grammar to its use. But somehow, you just don’t see the hominids gathered before you. And you don’t consider that hominids, as a family of animals, are famed for their sense of fun, although not to the extent of dolphins, seals and the lemurs of Madagascar. Incredibly, you blame the students for the boredom. Generously, you begin your explanation. You, the commissar of grammar. You, a cog in the grinding TEFL money-machine.

CASH FROM GRAMMAR

Bear in mind that many humans become competent users of English as a foreign or second language without EVER studying grammar. Also bear in mind that there are many people with a comprehensive knowledge of English grammar who cannot speak the language - these, the victims of people on boards of examiners and EFL businesses, who are all sincerely interested in grammar as a means of making money. These perverse superbeings construct systems which class individual humans as lower-intermediate, false beginners etc etc. I mean, if you squint your mind a little, you can see it more clearly: brilliant, mediocre or rubbish. Their grammar is for constructing exams and failing these exams means exclusion and ridicule and paying more. 'Humbug!' is my opinion of that.

MAKE MISTAKES!

Mistakes are always interesting. They tell us things about other languages and other cultures and they give teachers the opportunity to say, ‘Ah. I can help you with that.’

MAKING MISTAKES ∝ LEARNING

People make mistakes because they are intelligent. There are two processes involved: generalization, which leads to errors such as breaked and transference (from L1 or their mother tongue) which leads to utterances such as I have seen her five minutes ago. Although generalization and transference generate errors, these processes are vastly more helpful than they are damaging.
Teachers who react negatively (anger, ridicule) to student errors understand less about foreign language acquisition than their students who are actively looking for successful rules and are brave enough to risk making mistakes. Again, there are big bucks to be made out of penalizing learners' mistakes.

ANARCHY IN THE UK

English has no rules. None. There is no Royal Academy of the English Language. The language belongs to no one... and everyone! It generates culture (books, films, plays and pop music) with virulence. It is the language of trade and commerce.

So, if English has no rules, what the blazes is English grammar? Grammar, just as much as vocabulary and intonation, generates meaning: it places people and objects in time; it powers the imagination and it makes utterances coherent. You use it in order to be understood. You use it in order to think. What your students learn to pass some confounded exam isn’t language. It is a set of strict prescriptive rules that add up to nothing. As EFL teachers, we often notice that what we are teaching is not the language we use. My task, as a person, is giving the English language to anyone who wants it via the world that surrounds us. Well, at least when the DOS (director of studies) isn’t on the prowl.

And here is the meaning of life:-

Okay, I'm going to explain the pronunciation of regular verbs in the past. Listen carefully because this is a bit complicated. The pronunciation of the –ed ending of regular verbs depends on the type of sound at the end of the verb, not the letters, the sound. That is what controls everything.

There are three different types of sound at the end of a regular verb: firstly, a vowel sound, for example /æ/ in “multiply” or /ə/ in “offer”. Okay, that's one. For the second one, we have verbs ending in a vibration of the vocal chords. These are called voiced consonants. Here are some examples. Put your fingers on your throat while you listen and repeat:-

arrive... arrive; love... love; name... name and call... call.

Could you feel the vibration?

Now repeat all the voiced consonants:-
B, G, L, M, N, V, Z.

Right. Now, the third type of sound are the unvoiced consonants. Examples are /p/ as in “stop” and /ʃ/ as in “wash”. There is zero vibration of the vocal chords with these consonants.

Okay, so listen and repeat all the unvoiced consonants. If you put your fingers on your throat, you will feel that there is no vibration:-
K, F, P, S, SH, CH, X.

Okay, back to the first type of sound, the verbs ending in a vowel sound.

L + R the infinitives and the past simple of the following verbs.
agree-agreed; destroy-destroyed; offer-offered

Question: how is the –ed ending pronounced with verbs ending in a vowel sound? Listen.

"Offered-offered."

"/d/"

Right. /d/. Now I am going to say the verb in infinitive and you say it back to me in the past simple. I will give you the answer only if you need it, before I say the next one. Example: play... played. Now you:

allow allow offer offer
cry cry play play
free free prepare prepare multiply multiply reply reply

Great. Now, let’s do the second type - the verbs ending in the voiced consonants B, G, L, M, N, V, Z. Listen and repeat:-
call-called; live-lived;

So, my question is: how is the –ed ending pronounced with verbs ending in a voiced consonant, such as “live - lived”?

"/d/"

Right. /d/, the same as the verbs ending in a vowel sound such as "offer - offered”. Now I am going to say the verb in infinitive and you say it back to me in the past simple.

arrive arrive happen happen
believe believe rain rain
call call smile smile
explain explain welcome welcome

Perfect. And now for a big question: what happens if the verb ends in the voiced consonant “d”, like in "decide". I mean, you can't say “decidudud”, can you? Try to pronounce the past simple of "decide"

"Decided"

Ah hah. Yes, we say “decided”. So, how is the –ed ending for all verbs ending in the /d/ sound pronounced, as in "decided"?

"/-id/"
-id/. Fantastic. Now repeat “decide, decided”. Now I am going to say the verb in infinitive and you say it back to me in the past simple. Okay?

add include
avoid land
depend need expand

Brilliant. So far, so good. Now, what about the third type?

The third type are the verbs ending in the unvoiced consonants K, F, P, S, SH, CH, X. Listen and repeat:-

cook-cooked; laugh-laughed; miss-missed

So, how is the –ed ending pronounced in “missed”?

“/t/”

/it/. Yes. Now I am going to say the verb in infinitive as usual and you say it in the past.

ask help
dance stop
finish wash
guess watch

Very good, very good. Question: what happens when the verb ends in the unvoiced consonant “t”, as in “complicate”? Pronounce the past simple of “complicate.”

“Complicated”

Bravo. So when the regular verb ends in a T sound, how is the –ed pronounced?

“/-id/”

Now try these:-

accept insist attract print
count taste
eliminate waste

Regular Verb -ED Pronunciation PART TWO

Can you explain the rules for pronouncing the –ed in the regular past?

Listen:-

He agrees... he agreed

Now you:-

I agree We need milk
I deny it They ask difficult questions
He employs three people I check my emails in the morning
She plays rugby We like dark chocolate
You copy my work I promise to go
You explain things very well I want candy
Bad things happen They waste time and money
They change things I only wait 15 minutes
She avoids me
